

CHELO'S GOOD-TO-GO

Warwick, Rhode Island

CLIENT:

Chelo's Hometown Bar & Grill

Warwick, Rhode Island

PROJECT SCOPE:

2,400 sf of completely new construction.

CHALLENGE:

Rhode Island's largest family-owned restaurant chain with nine other locations was rolling out a fresh, new concept and needed a fresh, new build-out to house it. With the support of the rest of the chain, Chelo's was kicking up its business a notch by starting up a drive-through location - the first of its kind for the company. The Airport Road location was a busy one, with a high volume of street traffic and the close proximity of businesses nearby.

COBALT ADVANTAGE:

Cobalt completed construction, designed by DP Evers, on time and under budget. The building is a steel structure with a brick veneer façade. The interior includes custom-built millwork and a 40-seat eat-in dining room. The good-to-go concept is now an established part of the company's business model.
